

The Medical Side of Elder Law

7.4
CLE CREDIT(s)

Presented in cooperation with the NJSBA Elder and Disability Law Section

Medical issues are intertwined with legal issues in the field of elder law. Navigating the health care system and establishing adequate home care can be frustrating, confusing, and difficult. Decisions often need to be made in the midst of a crisis. Aging clients and their families often turn to their attorneys to guide them as they deal with health care emergencies, chronic and acute illness, and declining capability. As a result, lawyers need knowledge of the medical side of elder law to complement the related practice areas which deal with financial planning, benefits, and relationships, such as trusts & estates, Medicaid eligibility, and family law.

This seminar will provide you with the information you need to ensure that you can help your clients protect their physical and financial well-being. Seasoned elder law attorneys will take you through some of the most common needs and pressing legal issues - as well as the latest updates in law and procedure. You'll walk away with both the tools and confidence you need to successfully handle medical-related matters for your senior clients and their families.
